

Adopt a Newborn!

French bulldogs easily become the best buddies ever for you and your family, but will they become a part of it? The best part about adopting a dog is that you make another living being happier, bring joy to one more beating heart, and realize that there are new responsibilities ahead.

We do want our puppies to find a new home where they will feel loved and wanted. Our breeders carefully raise and prepare them for a brighter future with their new families.

Do not ever surrender a dog!

We strongly believe that adopting a dog is much like adopting a child. The way they will live and what they become depends on their owners. Before you welcome our puppy to your home be advised on some of the main issues with a newborn:

- Many behavior problems are easily solvable with proper training, attention, and care.
- Adopting a puppy is a great responsibility; it takes fortitude and commitment to raise a dog as a part of your family.
- Be sure that every family member wants a dog. Your new buddy must feel that he is loved by everyone who he believes to be his family.

If you truly want a French gentleman in your house, be prepared to attend his needs and provide him good care. He will repay you generously by being the most adorable and sensitive friend you have ever met in your life!

How to Choose a Right Puppy

Puppies are all different and they show their character from the first few days of their lives. We always try to introduce them properly and describe their main traits, but in the end, everything comes down to a simple choice: to adopt or not to adopt.

Look carefully at the puppies and choose the one that looks like a friend you always wanted to have. French bulldogs are cheerful and affectionate creatures and they will gift you lots of love. Just choose the one YOU will love.

How to Prepare for His Arrival

For the new guys we will have a couple of tips on how to get your home ready for a new family member:

1. Be mindful of his first experience. Your new buddy will be anxious at first, give him some space, allow him to get used to the environment. Let him choose where to sleep and what to eat. The first week is not the greatest time to start training.
2. Shop for things he will need. A small bed, food, water, dishes for them, and toys. Get ready to acquire an ID tag. The more things you have before your puppy arrives, the easier it will be to comfort him.
3. Set a schedule immediately. Make time for him before he comes to your house. Establish the times when you feed him, when you play with him, and when you want to take him for a walk. He will need your attention every day.
4. Give him some intimacy. Let your new pal have his own time and explore the new world he is living in. First couple of days he will be missing his mom and be sad, it is ok to let him go through this hard period alone.
5. Find a pet doctor. In the first weeks after your puppy gets home, introduce him to a veterinarian. The earlier you start caring about your dog's health, the better.

Adopt a Newborn Already!

If you made up your mind and truly want to adopt a French bulldog, feel free to read through our list of puppies ready to be adopted right now! They are waiting for you and you only!

Добавлено примечание ([U1]): Кросс-линковка со статьей «Will He Ever be Alone?»

Добавлено примечание ([U2]): Кросс-линковка со статьей «What Does Your New Buddy Like»

Добавлено примечание ([U3]): Кросс-линковка со статьей «Feed Him Properly»

Добавлено примечание ([U4]): Ссылка на страницу каталога.